Policy Collaboratory

The New Jersey State Policy Lab at Rutgers University and the School of Public and International Affairs at Princeton University will be hosting the second annual Policy Collaboratory and will welcome graduate students from Princeton and Rutgers universities to work together and brainstorm various solutions to address affordable housing challenges in the Garden State.

In consultation with academic experts from a variety of disciplines as well as advocates, policymakers, elected officials, and people with lived experience, students will work together in mixed teams to develop creative and original solutions to this policy problem.

The half-day event will include a complimentary lunch as well as a networking cocktail hour after the conference. Registration is required.
